AMBASSADOR OJI NYIMENUATE NGOFA

His Excellency, Ambassador Oji Nyimenuate Ngofa is a charismatic young man whose political history and accomplishments amidst challenging circumstances has been a source of inspiration to the youths.

Many are called, but few are chosen. Ambassador Oji Ngofa is quintessential in this regard. He is one of few lucky young Nigerian politicians who have had an unusual rapid political career growth within a short period of time, despite suffering serious initial setbacks.

Because of his quest to serve and impact positively to improve the lot of his constituents on a large scale, Ngofa resigned from his high executive and plump job and ventured into politics in 2003 at the age of 36 to contest for the seat of the executive chairman of his local government council during a period that the ruling elderly and old politicians saw the youth only useful as their foot soldiers who were not good enough to occupy political offices. A decision which almost ruined his life. His greatest undoing that aggravated his plight was that he joined the then opposition party, All Nigeria People's Party (ANPP). He suffered an untold onslaughts from the ruling People's Democratic Party (PDP).

Although he had a teeming support base that could have earned him electoral victory, the ruling party deployed power of incumbency and huge government funds to rig him out. His campaign train was attacked and about 9 of his supporters were killed, a good number of them and him were chased out of town; and all their property and personal effects were either destroyed and or burnt. He lost all his fortunes and savings he earned while working. But he was not deterred, rather he remained resilient and vigorously determined to wrestle power from the then conservative ruling class.

The political onslaught was his catalyst. It evoked public sympathy that made him a very formidable opposition figure that could not be ignored in the political equation of his constituency.

His resilience and boldness paid off in 2008. He was elected into office as the executive chairman of Eleme Local Government Council with an unprecedented landslide victory in May 2008. He remains in history of Nigeria's grassroots politics as one of the few politicians that was not only elected for a second term, but was immediately appointed as a care-taker chairman upon the completion of his second term in office as an elected local government chairman, and was subsequently reappointed a care-taker chairman of the same local government council upon the completion of the six months term of his successor; thereby serving two terms each as an elected chairman and care-taker chairman, respectively.

While still serving as care-taker chairman for the second term, divine providence lifted him to occupy the office of the Deputy National Secretary of the All Progressives Congress (APC). While he was yet to serve out his statutory tenure, favour located him again as he was nominated as an ambassadorial candidate. He was successfully screened and cleared by the Nigerian Senate and now serves as Nigeria's Ambassador to the Kingdom of the Netherlands.

Ambassador Ngofa's political ascension did not come as a surprise to many who are acquainted with his track record. As a local government chairman, he initiated and implemented laudable policies and schemes that scaled up the bar of leadership within his constituency. Although, he believes more in capacity building, the dearth of infrastructure in his local government area compelled him to strike a balance between human capacity building and infrastructural development. Some of the landmark projects and schemes he executed include construction of roads, building of a 1020 stall capacity ultra-modern market complex, building of office block, council secretariat, community halls and multi-purpose event centre, purchase of state-of-the-art mobile ambulance, purchase of operational vehicles for council principals officers, police formations, students and traditional rulers, water supply, public transportation, electricity, sports, award of scholarships, skill acquisition, public enlightenment etc.
